[1] Dear Sir,

You will perhaps not have forgotten an Englishman by name Wordsworth who along with his friend Mr. Coleridge had a few years ago the honor of making your acquaintance at Mr. Aders' (?)¹ of Godesbury and of visiting you at your own house in Bonn. Upon the strength of his acquaintance [all]igate[d] (?) us, - to my regret it is - I have entered to introduce to you Dr. James Vote a young English Physician, who is travelling upon the continent for the purpose of completing his medical education. He will make suite[d] (?) a stay at the [2] most distinguished medical Schools as will enable him to add to the knowledge to be acquired in his own country. - If, in furthenance to this object, you could introduce him to any distingued Professors at Bonn, I should deem it a great favor to myself which I should be most happy to repay by attention to any of your friends whom the beautiful features of that part of England I live may induce to pass this way.

I have the honor to be with great respect your obliged Servant
W. Wordsworth.
